NEW PARENTING TOOL MINIMIZES PESKY TANTRUMS WITH EASY-TO-SING SONGS!

(New York) – A new tool that teaches parents to prevent or minimize impending tantrums using their natural voices to sing simple songs will soon be available everywhere, according to Pump Mama.com.

“As an educator-turned-mom, I wanted to share my techniques for addressing those times when little ones are about to launch into one of those full-on, limp-body tantrums,” said Lee Uehara, owner of Pump Mama.com and Pump Mama Records. “So I created a CD to show parents that behavior management through singing can yield great success in re-directing small children.”

The album, Tunes for Transitions: Simple Songs to Soothe Toddlers – for Parents, Caregivers, and Teachers, consists of nine main songs such as Two Bites Rule and Cranky Walk. The idea behind the 40-second songs is that they are short; easy-to-sing for adults who think that they cannot sing; and soothes children in a fun way. Each song includes two learning tracks.

“By singing any one of these songs, adults who work with small children can re-direct them, or more importantly, buy themselves a much-needed five-second break from possible regretful actions due to the anger and frustration that can occur in the heat of a major toddler moment,” Uehara says. “And, all children want to hear their parents sing, so this CD helps with building confidence for that.”

The first track to be available will be We’re On Our Way. This song will have children humming along as they walk with less protest. The sheet music book for all songs will soon be available, too.

Tunes for Transitions is set for release on September 15th, 2014. It will be available on iTunes, Amazon, and CD Baby. Pre-ordering is now available for the CD at www.PumpMama.com.
